Wes Hamilton, a powerhouse of inspiration, felt his personal transformation from injury and addiction had the potential to help others who are struggling with similar battles, so he founded a non-profit called, Disabled But Not Really (DBNR). DBNR has helped so many individuals with disabilities (not just physical) to feel empowered and has helped so many lives overcome any mental limitations they may have – which is the driving force of the organization. The passion Wes has for DBNR is evident by its expansion.
